ArtWanted

www.ArtWanted.com/iuoma is the place where I have published some of the artworks I have made. Seems like this site grows quickly and brings many visitors. Funny are the comments it brings from fellow artists and the rating system. I know mail-artists don't like to rate artworks. But we also do know we like certain things more than others. For me it is interesting to see how people I don't know react to the works. Do they understand what am doing and what I want to express?

Mail-Art and Mail-Art Blogs

An interesting reaction to the BLOG's by Jim Hayes (USA). He writes on his card that it is just impossible to keep up with all those mail-art blogs that have popped up, let alone find the time to keep one online himself. Yes, the digital world also absorbs a lot of time, and it doesn't bring you more time to spend on ceating that traditional snail-mail.

I too find it less interesting to see all the digital work of others. The hard-copies in the mailbox are still my favorite. But I do know that a lot of newcomers have discovered mail-art because of the online world, and have started to send out their pieces.
